Brookline Builders also is an advocate for adding onto your existing home either with an addition or better yet by adding a second or third floor. If you add a livable story to your home you have not added to the impervious surface of this earth we live on. The more green space we all contribute, the cooler we are and the more ground water we will have.

Why not install a storm water collection pit for your existing home, even if the township doesn't require it? Every time there is a gusher rainstorm, and we don't collect that water and return it to the ground, the more we contribute to the erosion problem and lower ground water that we have in this area.
